On Confessions

Editor:

Regarding your June 4 article on the murder of Reetpaul Singh Rana ("Innocent People Don't Want Attorneys"): For a criminal justice system based on laws, you have to embrace those laws or get them changed. The Supreme Court has affirmed the rights to remain silent, have effective legal counsel and be innocent until proven guilty by sufficient proof. And we've all heard of people convicted but later found to be innocent, with their lives ruined or even wrongfully executed.

Police have an incredibly difficult job. Most officers accept and honor our system of law, even knowing it occasionally protects the guilty from the law's penalties. If a court of law finds officers in the Rana murder trial violated defendants' constitutional protections, I suspect the officers only acted as they believed their superiors expected them to act. Police performance ratings focus on how many cases they "clear" by getting a conviction, rather than how many people they investigate and prove innocent. Honoring constitutional protections should be just as important as how many cases they clear.

That's true especially in this case, where detective Wayne Hanson is quoted as saying, "there's still evidence and witnesses enough to go forward." One wonders what pressure the officers were under to also use tactics Judge Chen described as "classic examples of what police should NOT do when the subject of an interrogation asks for counsel." We should look behind what the officers did to see what their superiors and prosecutors expect them to do — note that the United States Attorney's Office is appealing the judge's ruling, apparently unqualifiedly approving what happened.

Jeff Knapp, Arcata

Editor:

So, "innocent people don't want attorneys," huh? If that's so, then anyone with an attorney can be assumed to be guilty, right? Why on earth didn't anyone tell us this sooner? Think of the implications! No more of that pesky evidence and witness testimony stuff; a jury can simply say, "Hey, look... He has an attorney! Guilty as charged!" Slam-dunk conviction. Soon, no one, innocent or not, will want an attorney and they will simply go away and we can all go back to lynching one another in the streets like in the good old days. Brilliant!

Thank you, detective Hanson, for your thoughtful insight into how the system ought to function. Whatever taxpayer money you've spent on the case thus far should be amply compensated by the streamlining of the legal process that is sure to follow.

Slow Motion Collapse

Near the Mad River Bridge, enormous, leaning, roof slanting to weeds,
the gray red hay-barn yearns toward level;
slow-motion catastrophe slipping down like years.
Nearby, pickups loll in tall grass, as blind to its wreck as children playing on a crumbling bluff.

When we drive by we're on watch.
Has the crisis come, the final crash?
Today as before the roof rounds its exhausted shoulders, holed, sieved; boards shattered and shivered to shards,
some walls, like nets, more holes than old wood.
Doors gape, neither open nor shut.
It stands, not yet to earth,
like an elephant down on a knee,
her trunk raised, trumpeting in agony.
As in a photograph of war, we hear no groan or roar.

Make haste! Pay your respects to this monument of decay

4). I have been propagating and growing alstroemerias for 29 years; in general, they all need good to great drainage and thus are not “tolerant of damp soil.”

Deer often eat the flower buds of alstroemeria with the exception of species like A. aurantiaca. Probably 90 percent of the alstroemerias sold in local nurseries are hybrids which makes them vulnerable to deer grazing. (Though some herds are pickier eaters than others!)

Also, if stems are cut while flowers are still in big bud (just a few days before opening) they will open and last for three weeks in a vase as long as the flower arrangement is not in the sun. However, the plant, whether in a pot or in the ground, does need full sun. But please don't cut all your alstroemeria flowers for the house because the hummingbirds love them!

I have two additional suggestions for adding to one's cut flower beds: the variegated cast iron plant (Aspidistra elatior 'Variegata') and cannas, both of these plants for their leaves. They have been impressive in both large fundraising and intimate house arrangements. I have had the leaves last for two-plus weeks in a vase and they make an exceptional foil for cut flowers in an arrangement especially a dark-leaved canna like 'Wyoming.'

We Need Facts

Editor:

Tony Platt's story, "Homicide by Police" (May 14) states that Freddie Gray in Baltimore was beaten to death. Nowhere have I heard this was a beating death. I am sure something happened there, what is needed is reporters to "report" the facts. If Mr. Platt knows this was a beating death, he needs to state the source of his knowledge.

Is it Mr. Platt's opinion that Mr. Estrada was tried in the court of public opinion? If he was so tried, it is due to the media's coverage of the incident, not the law enforcement agencies. The injured officer was airlifted out of the area for medical help, he had to have been grievously injured. I doubt the officer was so badly injured after he had shot Mr. Estrada.

Mr. Platt states that "despite the lack of official statistics, the victims of police homicide are usually young, male and disproportionately African American, Latino and Native American." There are statistics Mr. Platt.

The word homicide is synonymous with the word murder. Is the reason for this article to pain the situation as murder? A better word to use until the investigation is complete is "shooting" or "killing," unless Mr. Platt knows something no one else knows.

The shooting involved a CHP officer, not a sheriff. The CHP should not investigate the situation. The sheriff's officers may have been the first to get to the scene after the fact and then became responsible to gather and protect any evidence.

I agree with Mr. Platt that the investigation needs to be competed and presented in a transparent, fair way. The Estrada family and the CHP deserve this. The investigation should not take almost a year to complete.

Deldean Lamb, Eureka

Editor's Note: Merriam-Webster defines homicide as "a killing of one human being by another." California law breaks homicides into three categories: murder, manslaughter and justifiable homicide.

Hyper-pension

Editor:

This is a joke, right? Thadeus Greenon's "Reckoning Day" (May 7) was a joke, right? Greg Sparks, the city manager, "broke the news" that the city budget is short $2 million. Our city department heads just found this out? Wasn't Measure Q supposed to fix our city police/fire departments? Don't get me wrong, all respect to the police/firefighters, but for every $1 they earn we're contributing $.42 to $.45 to their retirement? C'mon man. Fifteen percent of the city's general fund will be used to pay pensions in the upcoming year and then it gets worse. These pensions are breaking us.

Greenon's article gave the impression that our city department heads and, I assume, the city council were totally surprised with the $2 million shortfall. No one talked to our city manager before this? Is everyone communicating? These 2012 reforms stated that 2015 would be the drop dead year. No planning was done? Was the plan another tax increase? What's being done with the pensions? What are our leaders doing?

Our taxes are paying for the police/fire/safety personnel and the hundreds of social welfare programs the bums/derelects/homeless/deranged/druggies/criminals are using and there is nothing left for us. Half the county budget is spent by the Department of Health and Human Services ($150 million a year!). Thirty-three percent of the city's budget is spent on police and fire. We are told the choices are tax increases or we might die. Let's try to cut costs in an efficient logical way; reduce/eliminate redundancy; pay an arbitrator for negotiations; show accountability; shrink the government, use technology, promote Humboldt to business and stop threatening our safety.

Things need to change. They aren't working and haven't worked for a long time. Governments only create more government jobs. Our county and city need better, bolder and more creative leadership to progress. Pretty simple.

Rick Brennan, Eureka

Correction

A story on page 5 of the June 4, 2014 edition of the North Coast Journal headlined, "Trinidad Fish Festival Evolves to Keep from Floundering," misidentified the agency hoping increased beer and wine sales will make up for reduced food sales. It was the Trinidad Chamber of Commerce. The story also mistakenly referred to a specific tribe that may put on an educational dance demonstration at the festival in the future, while the opportunity to participate would be open to members of all local tribes. The Journal regrets the errors. ●

Eyes on Woodley Island

The harbor district contends for waterfront heavyweight

By Grant Scott-Goforth

grant@northcoastjournal.com

As Eureka continues to re-envision its waterfront, making incremental improvements, a power player is emerging: The Humboldt Bay Harbor, Recreation and Conservation District. An often quiet elected body, the district rose into the public spotlight several times in the last few years when it took ownership of the Samoa Pulp Mill, spurring a cleanup of the caustic materials left behind.

That purge continues — the Environmental Protection Agency has been working on the site since last year, first trucking the toxic liquors left at the mill to Washington and then beginning the process of dismantling the tanks that housed them.

Now, according to Harbor District CEO Jack Crider, only the three tall tanks remain and, when it's all finished, the EPA will have hauled nearly 10,000 tons of material off of the pulp mill grounds.

The district is still negotiating with a company to purchase the mill's boiler, but little headway has been made. Meanwhile, the smokestack, one of the Eureka skyline's trademarks, is slated to be blown up by the military in a controlled demolition.

And when the military comes to demolish, the motto is "P for plenty," Crider said. "Lots of powder, lots of dynamite — there's a probability that we'll end up breaking some windows," and the district is working out how to handle that.

Another key part of the district's rising tide is the evolution of Woodley Island, the home of the district, Eureka's National Weather Service Station, a large public marina, a more than 40-acre wildlife area and the Café Marina restaurant.

Crider said plans are already in the works to add a second dining option to the scenic island, but the Harbor District, in a unanimous vote, also just asked the city of Eureka to consider changing the island to a more permissive land use designation — a plan that has raised some concern in the commercial fishing community.

In a letter to the city of Eureka, harbor commission board President Richard Marks asked the city to consider changing the zoning of 17.3 acres, comprising much of the developed area of the island, to waterfront commercial, the same designation as much of the south side of the bay, including the waterfront along Old Town. The majority of the island, nearly 45 acres, would remain a natural resource designation, and about 20 acres — the marina itself and the National Weather Service station — would remain public-quasi public. Currently, much of the island's developed area is public-quasi public and the city allows restricted types of development on the land.

The requested change represents a bit of a turning point, said Harbor Commissioner Mike Wilson. "When the general plan was last updated, there was a perception that there was this conflict between working waterfront activities and what attracts citizen tourists to the waterfront," he said. "But a lot of that's changed."

The city used to think there was a dichotomy between a "working waterfront" — where fishing and other industrial activities created a bustle of activity, including noise, smells and perceived eyesores — and

a tourist-friendly waterfront. But now, more and more people are realizing that industry and recreation are not opposing forces; a working waterfront is a tourist draw.

Wilson said the district is trying to bring Woodley Island out of an operating deficit, and that a zoning change could "create more diversity in our revenue streams, ... create the vitality that supports the use of the marina."

And while the district's current land use designation on Woodley Island allows for many types of businesses — retail, restaurants, etc. — the land use changes would allow for a "mix of visitor serving, commercial and recreational fishing, and natural resource land uses," according to Marks' letter.

Some of those expansions have at least one fisherman worried. Ken Bates, in his May newsletter on commercial fishing, wrote that the harbor district hasn't mentioned the "hundreds of other non-water-dependent activities permitted under their proposed waterfront commercial zoning request."

Among those uses are Christmas tree sales lots, beauty shops, dentists offices, churches and more — businesses, Bates seems to suggest, that wouldn't directly benefit the fishing industry.

Bates also warned that the waterfront commercial designation would permit fishing fleet activities but that "these activities can be restricted because of 'heavy truck traffic, noise, air or water bone odors, dust, dirt, elimination, smoke, glare, vibrations, exhaust or other objectionable influences by industry.'"

Perhaps responding to these concerns, Wilson proposed a right-to-fish ordinance, which, if adopted, would protect fishing

Island Land Use

operations from the complaints of nearby tenants.

Crider said these types of ordinances aren't uncommon in other areas — imagine the concerns of fishing boat operators if new condominiums were being developed next to the marina. But, Crider said, it's less of an issue if the tenants — fishing boats and whatever retail, restaurant or office space might set up on Woodley Island — all rent from one landlord: the Harbor District.

“Plus,” Crider said, “people come to the island to see the activity. They enjoy the commercial activity and what [the fishing boats] do. They're actually an attraction.”

At last month's harbor district meeting, Commissioner Aaron Newman said the ordinance would clear up the “angst of the fishermen” and Marks said it shows the district's commitment to the industry, according to the meeting's minutes.

In an email, Eureka Community Development Director Robert Holmlund said the city — under council direction — is looking at expanding commercial use on the island based on the harbor district's request and “well-coordinated” land use and zoning regulations in similar marinas in Fort Bragg and Crescent City. Commercial fishing, Holmlund emphasized, will remain a priority.

“Under all scenarios, the marina portion of Woodley Island will continue to be primarily dedicated to ensuring a thriving fishing industry,” he wrote. He said he hasn't received any complaints from the public regarding the land use designation change.

Movement is underway off of Woodley Island as well. Holmlund referred to an extension of the Hikshari' trail, slated to break ground in 2016, that will reach north past Target and inland to Planned Parenthood. And, earlier this month, the Eureka City Council awarded architect Kash Boodjeh $30,000 to come up with a design charrette for the long-dead stretch of waterfront property between F and C streets.

Back on Woodley Island, Crider is excited about a new oyster restaurant he's proposing for the recently cleaned up storage yard on the western end of the island. The district is coming up with preliminary designs and looking for an operator for a restaurant that Crider says will be part oyster bar and part East Coast clam bake, where people can rent a grill and barbecue their own oysters.

He says a couple of bivalve businesses — Tomales Bay Oyster Company and Hog Island Oyster Co. — have expressed interest in operating a Humboldt Bay bar.

Under all scenarios, the marina portion of Woodley Island will continue to be primarily dedicated to ensuring a thriving fishing industry.

— Robert Holmlund

As Eureka staff analyzes the possible effects of land use designation changes on Woodley Island, the harbor district pushes along. Smokestacks fall, restaurants rise — if the district's able to continue on its path, will Eureka's mainland be able to keep up? ●

Bills from our two state representatives lurched forward in the last couple weeks. Assemblyman Jim Wood's "Marijuana Water-shed Protection Act," which would task water boards with developing marijuana cultivation regulations, was passed by the Assembly and now moves to the Senate. It was the first medical marijuana related bill to leave its house this year, narrowly beating out state Senator Mike McGuire's "Medical Marijuana Public Safety and Environmental Protection Act." (Did they both buy the same bill-naming book?)

McGuire's bill is further-reaching — "a regulatory framework for the industry covering the issues of environmental protection and water regulations, law enforcement, licensing, public health related to edibles and product testing, to marketing, labeling, taxing, transporting, zoning, local control and re-sale" — and will now move to the Assembly.

A recent article in Fortune highlights how investment capital is beginning to pounce on the fledgling legal marijuana market. The highlights:

There are 300 publicly traded cannabis companies in the U.S. — 10 times the number in existence two years ago.

Forty of those companies raised $95 million in 2014 and the first quarter of 2015.

ArcView Group, a marijuana investment firm, recently dropped $41 million on 54 marijuana companies.

The company says legal marijuana sales reached $2.7 billion last year.

Privateer Holdings, another investment firm that holds Marley Natural (the reggae-singer-branded bud company), has raised $82 million since its inception.

Meanwhile, the likeness of another music great of the '60s is set to grace the packaging of a weed-infused candy bar.

According to the San Diego Union-Tribune, a Toronto-based company signed exclusive rights to sell edibles "using the song titles and bearing the likeness of iconic guitarist Jimi Hendrix."

Hendrix isn't exactly a marijuana icon, though, aside from existing in an era that's celebrated for the weed by nascent counter-culturalists. Indeed, Nutritional High's CEO called Hendrix one of "maybe five key artists associated with the psychedelic age."

As the U-T puts it: "The products in question, which will be marketed under the Edible Experiences banner, include 'Purple Haze' and 'Stone Free' lines. Both are named after popular songs by Hendrix, neither of which were about marijuana, but why quibble over technicalities?"

Hendrix's estate hasn't exactly been generous with rights to songs. It famously refused to allow the André 3000-led biopic about Hendrix to use any of the guitarist's actual songs, though it let Citi Visa use "Purple Haze" in a commercial last year.

But Nutritional High isn't worried — apparently the company is working with Hendrix's brother, who owns a second company that sells the rights to Hendrix's likeness and song titles.

Citing the Bob Marley brand pot, Nutritional High's CEO told the U-T it was the "second major signing of an iconic music artist." Apparently, he's not a Willie Nelson fan.

Nelson, as readers know, has his own brand of weed coming out, and he's as big a marijuana/counter-culture icon as they come. Not to mention, he's the only living musician so far to attach his name to a product.

Choosing the right medical cannabis

Can be confusing at first with so many different and unusual names and choices. That being said, it is much easier to find a medical cannabis product that will work for you once you have figured out what your desired effect is.

We are learning so much more about this wonderful plant all the time. We now know that aspects of cannabis such as the flavor, contributes to the effect. Remember, "The nose knows" — So trust your instincts and keep a personal cannabis journal to note how certain strains affect you. One very important factor in choosing the right medicine for yourself is that each strain has a limit to the amount and type of cannabinoids that can be received by your body at a certain time. This is why you gain a tolerance faster to certain strains and others seem to medicate the same way for longer. By choosing to use different strains, and different methods of ingestions, such as using edibles or vaporizing, it is easier to keep your cannabinoid receptors fresh and ready to be activated by the next type of medicine you are using. This will help you conserve your medicine and get the maximum effect from it, and it can also help to reach the desired cannabinoid balance you are looking for. Each patient has an individual reaction to each type of medicine tried, and experimentation with different types of strains and methods of use is essential for the new patient.

In very little time, you'll be able to determine what works best for you. We are here to help you find what will work best for your needs. Please feel free to come to us with any questions or concerns. We believe in the "Heart of Humboldt" and professional and compassionate care is what you will always receive here.

Extinct Native Language Rebounds

There is no “hello” in Wailaki. The traditional greeting, en tchong, en tchong shun da, translates to “good, good my friend.” The language, part of the Athabascan linguistic family and spoken originally by Native Americans in the Eel River Valley, has been considered extinct for close to 50 years. Now, thanks to the efforts of a group of teenagers, their dedicated teacher and the painstaking work of several linguists, it may be time to say en tchong to Wailaki once more.

Garberville resident Ben Schill is one of a team of linguists who has spent the last decade transcribing written descriptions of the Wailaki language from primary sources and attempting to determine its pronunciation. Much of this is guesswork, as the language was poorly recorded and not widely studied before its last native speakers died in the 1960s. Members of the Wailaki tribe were among many removed from their tribal lands and then forced to speak English. The majority of Wailaki descendants currently live on the Round Valley Reservation in Covelo, which is where the language’s unlikely renaissance took root.

“I wanted to speak my own language,” says Darin Merrifield, freshman at Round Valley High School. “No one in my family spoke it. It feels pretty awesome. You just got to get used to the sounds.”

Lorenzo Lambertino, now a lecturer at San Jose State University, worked on restoring the Wailaki language as a graduate student.

“I’m so proud of these kids,” he says. “It’s a Herculean task but, little by little, the language is coming back.”

Drama, Trauma & Baby Dolls

CalFire’s third and final seasonal firefighter training of the year took place recently at the Hilkfiker Training Site. What are they training for? Everything. Literally every scenario that might require their response, from a burning school bus to running up six flights of stairs in full protective gear. On the day we visited, returning firefighter Dylan Fluet had his legs pinned between two junked cars. The scenario: a parking lot mishap. Fluet moaned loudly as his crew, six green recruits, assessed the scene and tried to remove him.

“Oh, my legs, can’t you get the car off me?” Fluet groaned.

“We’re working on it, sir,” said one of the recruits, holding Fluet’s wrist.

“My baby? Where’s my baby?”

“Your baby’s right here sir,” said another recruit, cradling a plastic baby doll.

“I think he missed his calling,” said Devin Kilbride, another returning firefighter, of Fluet while watching the scene with a grin.

Capt. Chris Brown, who was supervising the scene, also smothered a small smirk when Fluet began beating the hood of the car. When the team helped Fluet from between the cars and onto the ground

Brown broke in with questions.

“So that car wasn’t moved yet. Did you just rip his legs off?”

The firefighters moved the still-wailing Fluet onto a stretcher and began to stabilize his limbs.

“Why are you putting the neck brace on?” asked Brown.

“He might have hit his head when the car hit him,” replied a trainee.

“He was holding the baby when the car hit him. Did the baby have any injuries?”

“No.”

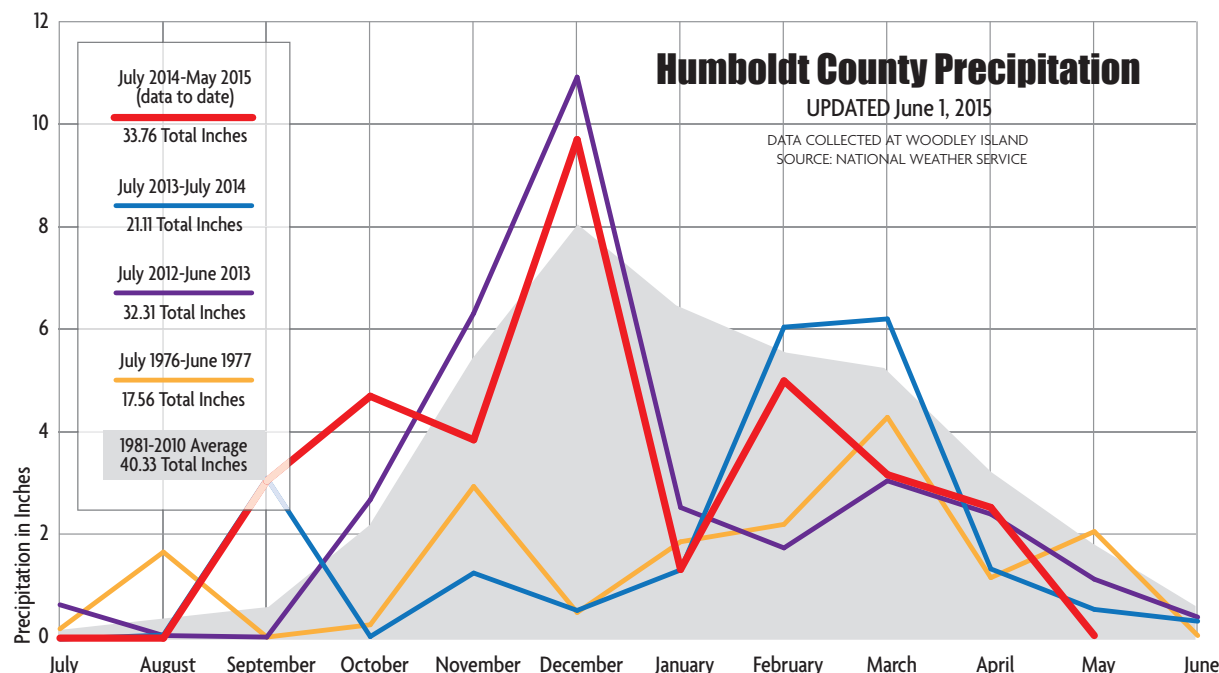

“So he doesn’t have a neck injury,” Brown said. “Remember, he might be waiting in the E.R. for a long time, and whatever gear they’re wearing when they come in the doctors have to keep on until they treat him. You don’t want him to have that on if he doesn’t need it.”

As Fluet cried on the stretcher, other teams of firefighters were performing CPR, practicing evacuations and

AS THE WATER YEAR CREEPS TO A CLOSE, ON THE HEELS OF HUMBOLDT’S THIRD DRIEST YEAR ON RECORD, IT SEEMS A GOOD TIME TO DUST OFF THE JOURNAL’S RAINFALL CHART. HUMBOLDT’S 2014-2015 WATER YEAR (JULY 1 THROUGH JUNE 30) HAS BEEN WETTER THAN THE PAST COUPLE, FILLING RUTH LAKE TO CAPACITY AND GENERALLY EASING WATER WORRIES. BUT WE STILL SIT ABOUT 16 PERCENT BELOW THE 30-YEAR AVERAGE AND EIGHT OF THE 11 MONTHS RECORDED SO FAR THIS YEAR CAME IN BELOW HISTORIC AVERAGES. THE GOOD NEWS IS THE OTHER THREE MONTHS — SEPTEMBER, OCTOBER AND DECEMBER — SAW RAINFALL AMOUNTS WELL ABOVE THEIR 30-YEAR AVERAGES. SO, HAVING ALREADY SEEN 12.66 INCHES MORE RAINFALL THAN LAST YEAR, THINGS ARE LOOKING UP. — THADEUS GREENSON

examining gear. The total training was a week long, with days devoted to wildland firefighting and other skills. Once the firefighters go on to their assignments they will have a daily physical training regimen and be prepared to respond to disasters all over the state.

Rio Dell Cop Arrested

Humboldt County District Attorney investigators arrested a Rio Dell police officer on June 5 on suspicion of domestic violence.

Kevin Harralson, a six-year veteran of the force, was taken into custody without incident on two counts of battery on a cohabitant and one count of exhibiting a firearm (both misdemeanors) stemming from two alleged incidents.

Rio Dell Police Chief Graham Hill declined to comment on the situation, referring inquiries to the DA’s Office. But Hill did say his department is conducting an administrative investigation parallel to the criminal one, and that Harralson has been placed on administrative leave. Hill also clarified that none of the alleged conduct is believed to have occurred while Harralson was on duty.

Harralson was booked into jail, with bail set at $100,000, but he had been released from custody as of 4:30 p.m. that same day, according to jail staff.

Eureka Budget Drama

Firefighters, police officers and concerned citizens packed Eureka City Council Chambers on June 3 to discuss proposed budget cuts. Both the Eureka Police Department and Humboldt Bay Fire are being asked to dig deep to compensate for a $2 million city budget shortfall, arousing the ire of voters and some civil servants.

Every seat was filled by the time the Pledge of Allegiance was said and a phalanx of uniformed police officers and firefighters stood at the rear of the room.

Council Member Kim Bergel (Third Ward) said she'd received a lot of concerned calls from seniors about the browning out of the Myrtle station. Firefighters at that station are the first responders to many medical calls at nearby assisted-living facilities.

Fire Chief Ken Woods spoke at length about transitioning to proactive rather than reactive response to medical emergencies, citing programs in other cities such as Mesa, Arizona, where fire departments partner with ambulance companies rather than sending out full trucks. Woods said the increase in response time to areas currently served by Station 4 by other units would be a total of two minutes.

Council Member Marian Brady (First Ward) asked if it would be feasible to change the shift schedules for firefighters, as referenced in Slattery's letter. Woods responded that a four-10 schedule was a good fit for police officers as they work individually, but research has proven that firefighters function best in 48-hour sleeping shifts, bonding as a team.

Next, Police Chief Andy Mills presented the proposed cuts to his department; a total of nine fulltime police services officer positions are slated to be cut, with two new positions being created to absorb essential functions, such as evidence handling.

The room had half-emptied by the end of Mills' presentation, but around 15 citizens went to podium to express their concerns about public safety cuts.

"You've given your suggestions, now I have a few suggestions for you," said Sylvia Scott. "Cut from somewhere else. Why are we cutting from public safety and funding the Sequoia Park Zoo? If you get raped, who's going to help you? A zookeeper? I don't think so."

A second budget meeting saw councilmembers suggest cutting donations to volunteer organizations. The council is slated to continue its budget discussion at its June 16 meeting.

CRIME

Wilde Gets Life

An apparently defiant and unrepentant Mikal Xylon Wilde will spend the rest of his life in federal prison for the 2010 murder of one of his workers at a Kneeland marijuana farm.

The 33-year-old Wilde was recently sentenced by a federal judge to serve life plus 35 years in prison after a jury convicted him on March 2 of a total of six charges, including murder in the commission of a narcotics offense and conspiracy. After the month-long trial, the jury deliberated for less than five hours before returning guilty verdicts on all counts.

Wilde was a principal owner of Ashfield Ranch LLC, which purchased a sprawling 660-acre property in Kneeland — about 11 miles from Wilde's home — in 2009. To help tend the more than 1,500 marijuana plants spread over four garden sites on the property, Wilde hired three men: Christopher Bigelo and two Guatemalans in the country illegally, Fernando Lopez and Mario Roberto Juarez-Madrid. Wilde was essentially broke at the time and, under increasing financial pressure, told the employees a couple of months after their arrival that he couldn't afford gas for the water truck they'd been used to irrigate the garden sites. They'd have to start watering by hand. The employees balked at this, and on Aug. 25, 2010 asked to be paid for the work they'd done and taken home. But Wilde couldn't pay them. He was $33,000 behind on mortgage payments on his house, which already has a $16,000 lien on it from the IRS. Sending them away without paying them ran the risk of angering them and jeopardizing his grow operation, which he needed to bring to harvest to pay off his debts, including the $200,000 he owed each of his two business partners.

So Wilde told the men he'd pay them and take them home, but when he returned to the property later that day he opened fire, wounding Lopez and killing Juarez-Madrid.

"The defendant hired illegal immigrants to work on his grow in the belief that they were expendable, not in a position to complain and that they might not be missed if they disappeared forever into the woods of Humboldt County," the U.S. Attorney's Office wrote in a pre-sentencing memorandum in the case. "When he could not pay them, he murdered one and tried to murder the other."

A 'Good' Year

Officials predict a busy fire season. What does this mean for the men and women who make their money from the flames?

By Linda Stansberry

Speculation is stock-in-trade during fire season. Rumors don't spread, exactly, but grow apace with the high grass watered by late spring rains. The state of the season is monitored with the same weather eye of a lookout watching the horizon for lightning strikes. As they did last year, hotshots check their gear, contractors gas up their trucks and battalion chiefs brief their crews on the latest incident protocol. And, like last year, they wait for the calls to come in. Last year, the waiting lasted a long, long time. Whether this year — the hottest on record — will flame or fizzle depends on a delicate mixture of weather, wind, fuel and human cooperation. And, as in every year, fear and anticipation do an uneasy dance. No one actually wants the world to burn, but many look forward to the money that flows when it does.

"I'm excited. I'm breathing heavy already," says Ken Richardson. "It should be a good year but that's what they said last year and I didn't turn a wheel last year."

Richardson is one of thousands of independent contractors who put in bids with CalFire and the U.S. Forest Service every year, hoping to get called out on a fire once the season starts. Contractors range from owners of water tenders and heavy equipment to drivers of personal four-wheel-drive trucks that deliver supplies and personnel to the fireline. Richardson and his wife, Carleen, fall into the latter category. Like many of the contractors, they are retirees who look forward to the seasonal income as a way to supplement their Social Security. In a "good" year, one with plenty of fires, the payoff can be anywhere from $15,000 to $20,000. But whether the initial investment in equipment and training will be returned is a gamble dependent on the vagaries of natural disaster.

"Officials said you can make good money with a bigger truck, so a few years ago I bought a one-and-a-quarter-ton truck," says Richardson, who has been working fires since 2006. "I sat on it for four years but it's paid off. It'll make money for you. You got to stick with it. You can't quit. Like any investment, you have to take care of it."

The likelihood of being called in to work a fire is a mixture of timing and finances. State and federal agencies are required to go with the lowest bid for contractors, so the less money requested, the greater the chance of being called into work, unless the season is demanding enough to require every hand on deck. All of the bids are made public on the Forest Service's website, so it's not uncommon for contractors to check how much their competition bid the previous year and to undercut them with even lower numbers. On average, a 16-hour day can earn about $260, not including mileage.

It's rare that contractors actually get close to the action; most camps are set up far away from the flames. A good gig is bringing in specialty personnel from out of the area; contractors are paid time and mileage to drive from far-flung national parks to the nearest airport and back. Many gamble on the money-per-mile from long trips like this to compensate for low initial bids.

"There are some financial incentives, but for more people it's a moral calling, a sense of service."

Richardson, a former paratrooper with the 82nd Airborne Division, says that he "doesn't like sitting down."

"I spent two years, 11 months and six days in the army, and all I did was jungle training. I got out about three weeks early, came home, then, by golly, saw all my buddies go over there to Vietnam and start dying. I wasn't really happy about that. I never saw action, but it was a good thing. The Lord had something else for me to do in about 50 years."

Mike Minton, interagency fire chief for Six Rivers National Forest, says Richardson's attitude is common among seasonal workers.

"There are some financial incentives, but for more people it's a moral calling, a sense of service," says Minton.

As wildfires become more common, so too does the mythos around their suppression. A reverence once applied to soldiers and police officers has shifted onto wildland firefighters, those who "hold the line." Last year a giant billboard went up on southbound U.S. Highway 101, in the middle of Eureka, bearing a portrait of a smudged and sweaty man in yellow, flame-retardant gear, burnt trees visible behind him. In the corner of the board was a tiny silver can, representative of the beer company, urging us to "Thank Our Heroes." The advertisement was reminiscent of the Marlboro Man: pure iconography, rugged valor writ bold to stir our hearts and open our wallets.

As in war, there are a small number of profiteers who chase the action for reasons other than a sense of service. During major incidents, T-shirt vendors often set up outside of command camps, cranking out colorful shirts with the names of particular complex fires. California Fire Tees, for example, "makers of quality incident wearables," still has shirts available commemorating the 2014 Happy Camp Complex fire, which bear a red and white image of an eagle's head screaming from a nest of biker tattoo-style flames. A competitor, Travelin' Ts, out of Reno, Nevada, boasts designs that look like something between an action movie poster and a rodeo belt buckle: The Yosemite Rim Fire T-shirt is a mish-mash of despondent looking grizzly bears and cartoonish firefighters framed by a howling wolf and soaring eagle. A flower of bright flame licks a rim of equally bright green trees. There must be demand among firefighters and camp support to immortalize their experience with these shirts, although Minton and others get a wry expression on their faces when asked about flame-chasers.

"T-shirt vendors shouldn't be on base," says Minton. “They can set up outside, and they do.”

(Neither T-shirt vendor returned calls as of press time.)

Inside the base, a makeshift city of tents and trailers houses an alphabet soup of agencies. Generators hum under a hazy sky, fueling charging stations and floodlights. A constant flow of sanctioned vendors — wholesale food trucks, portable toilet and shower providers — rumble across the dusty ground. “Smoke jumpers,” “hot-shots” and handcrews — those on the front line of the fire — sleep in shifts on bunks or in tents. Contractors and vendors often bring their own trailers or tents, sleeping a scant six hours before reporting to their supervisors for assignment. Tribal representatives are often present to provide logistical support, advocate to protect sites that have cultural significance or command their own crews. If the incident is close to a major thoroughfare, the California Highway Patrol might be in attendance. Occasionally, fire specialists from out of state will visit to consult with commanders.

All decisions flow through a management hierarchy originally developed by the Department of Homeland Security — the Incident Command System. The ICS is structured like a pyramid, with the incident commander at the top, and a hierarchy of titles (operations, logistics, administration) expanding as needed to a wide base. Every response agency in California puts its personnel through ICS training so they can meld easily into complex incidents without jurisdictional elbow-throwing. Depending on where the fire takes place, the incident commander may be an officer with the National Forest Service, CalFire or another agency entirely.

Seth Stone, a former seasonal firefighter with CalFire, describes life on a fire incident as a mixture of non-stop work interspersed with boredom and fatigue.

“Before I used to do fire, I had all sorts of impressions about how a fire progresses and what sort of danger you might be in,” says Stone, explaining that a rigorous training regime helped him and his colleagues focus through the nervous adrenaline of their first few incidents. “When I was in the first few fires, I knew all the steps to take, knew all the operating procedures: hose lay, cut line. You have no idea what will happen, how the fire progresses. After a while, though, you get an intuitive feel for how the fire’s behaving.”

Wildland firefighting is physically, emotionally and psychologically demanding. One minimum requirement in training is to complete a 3-mile hike (no jogging, no running) with a 45-pound pack in under 45 minutes. Crews may work for 12 to 24 hours a day cutting line (scraping open the turf or cutting down trees to remove fuel for the fire) and laying hose (unravelling hoses toward the fire line). Stone recalls being on duty for 40 days at one stretch during the 2008 fire season. He used his occasional breaks to call his girlfriend and family, a difficult task with the constant sounds of helicopters and trucks in the background. Base camp was usually “dusty and uncomfortable.” Sometimes he would turn down the offer to return to base camp altogether and instead sleep, exhausted, on the ground at the fire line.

“If you’re a young person and you’re working seasonally, it’s totally adequate for your lifestyle, but, once you start a family, you need to start thinking about getting a permanent job,” he says.

The average monthly pay for a seasonal firefighter with CalFire is around $2,200, with an extra $850 of guaranteed overtime when out on a fire. During the winter, Stone built sets for the Ferndale Repertory Theatre and did other small jobs. (His girlfriend eventually asked him to find more regular employment.)

Stone acknowledged there was a sense of black humor among firefighters, whose livelihood depended on the next lightning strike or campfire gone out of control. A common joke? As they dispersed from an incident, someone would say goodbye to their buddies by shouting: “Show you care, throw a flare.”

Mike Minton acknowledges stories such as Stone’s with a quick smile. Lore of arson-for-profit among seasonal firefighters has its own cultural cache, but he says actual cases are relatively uncommon.

“There have been enough natural fires in the last several years to provide more than enough work,” he says.

And exactly how much work will there be this year?

“What I’m about to talk about is not surprising,” said Jeff Tonkin, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service. “If we talked last year, I probably said virtually the same thing. This year is just a little bit better than last year, as of right now."

Tonkin was addressing a roundtable of agency representatives ranging from the U.S. Forest Service, California State Parks, the Humboldt County Sheriff's Office, Municipal Water District and community members, who all gathered at the Six Rivers National Forest headquarters in late May for a meeting on the state of the season. Although post-fire meetings after large incidents have been a common occurrence over the past decade, pre-season interagency planning meetings have only been taking place for the past three years.

Before introducing Tonkin to deliver the forecast, Forest Supervisor Merv George referred to the meeting as an example of the "offensive" strategies agencies could take.

"Traditionally, we've been really good at the defensive side of things, putting out fires. Maybe a little too good. We have more [flammable vegetation] because of that. A major fire incident can use a million dollars a day in resources. I can't tell you how many wonderful things our offense could do with a million dollars a day."

George added that deciding what to prioritize for saving in a major incident can be challenging: Should it be timberland? Structures? Homes? Sacred sites? During any major incident, the monetary and emotional worth of these resources are weighed against wind, weather and historical conditions in a computer algorithm operated by the Wildland Fire Decision Support System. Above all, he stressed, the safety of firefighters and the community should be paramount.

"I love the woods but our guys ... they need to come home to their loved ones."

Tonkin's address to the group was less passionate but equally effective in content. The findings of the National Weather Service supported the wisdom of those waiting on the ground: This could be a very, very bad year. Although late rains have put our region slightly ahead in moisture of where we were last year, it's unusual for them to persist into the summer. Things are going to dry out soon, and they're going to dry out fast. The grass spurred by spring rains will soon become prime ignition sources for lightning strikes.

The numbers are stark: This is the fourth year of the most severe drought the state

"Traditionally, we've been really good at the defensive side of things, putting out fires. Maybe a little too good. We have more [flammable vegetation] because of that."

Six Rivers National Forest
Supervisor

has seen on record. Snowpacks on the Sierra Nevada and other mountain ranges are at only 1 to 2 percent of normal. We are at 40 percent of our reservoir capacity. There have been 1,380 fires in California already this year, including a May fire in Benbow that caused CalFire to send out an ominous tweet: "Don't expect normal burn conditions this year." None of those present chose to use the term climate change, instead referring obliquely to "what the climate is doing lately," or "these things going on with the climate." Tonkin said it was unlikely that the drought will ease in the coming months, that, in fact, there is a “high likelihood that we’re going to see above-average temperatures this year.”

At this point, Mike Minton broke in to say that the 1,000-hour fuel moisture load was “the worst he had seen [in his] nine years of working fire.” The fuel moisture index is used to measure how resistant vegetation is to ignition. This year, large fuels, vegetation that takes 1,000 hours to absorb water from atmospheric conditions, are especially primed to ignite and spread wildfires. Minton added that these numbers are worse on the North Coast than they are inland, which he called “unusual.”

The one factor that neither Minton nor Tonkin can predict is lightning strikes. There are some atmospheric conditions that contribute to lightning, but when and where it will strike can’t be foreseen with any accuracy until storms roll in. Lightning strikes do tend to peak in July, but even without this leading contributor to wildfires, there is still human error and human malice to anticipate.

The community members at the table stirred uneasily at Tonkin’s predictions. Are the lookout towers being funded? Do we have enough water to fight fires this year?

Yes and yes, said Minton. Aerial support should still be able to draw water from streams and rivers.

“We are going to be conservative,” said Minton. “But we’re not going to see anywhere near the dramatic effects of the drought in the Northwest as in the rest of California.”

Later, the room split into two groups for a training exercise. Standing in front of maps labeled “Board Camp Wildfire Scenario,” people from the different agencies collaborated to answer such questions as “What are the values at risk for this wildfire?” and “What can you or your organization offer to assist us in the suppression of this wildfire?”

Minton stepped out of the room for a photograph and a private interview. He expressed optimism about improved communication between agencies and how technology, technique and the industry have all evolved in response to a changing landscape and increased frequency of incidents. Still, he said, federal agencies don’t have all the resources they need for an especially bad fire season.

“We’re redefining normal now,” he said.

The California Department of Corrections bridges a crucial gap in resources by supplying inmates to work the fireline. The inmates are subject to the same physical requirements and training as other firefighters, but their interaction with civilians is carefully chaperoned.

Seth Stone says inmate crews were among the most fun to work with, although he struggled at first to understand why he wasn’t allowed to share candy bars or fruit juice with them.

“They’re good workers,” Stone says. “They’re very motivated and capable and because of the fact that they come out of a lock up, a prison, they’re really excited to get out of those prison walls. During training it’s explained that if you dole out treats, etc., it disrupts their system. ‘Don’t give the inmates juice because they’ll go back and make Pruno [bootleg liquor] out of it.’”

Prisoners make up roughly half of those fighting wildfires, saving the state an estimated $1 billion a year, according to the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation. In return, they are offered reduced sentences and the opportunity to escape the monotony of incarceration. Their financial compensation tops out at $3 per day. Some have compared this system to slavery, while others have asked why low-level offenders who can be trusted with handtools and chainsaws are imprisoned in the first place. Sentencing reform in California state prisons has been an ongoing source of concern for those who rely on the inmate crews to fill in their budgetary gaps. Although some agencies have negotiated individual contracts with the jails that now house the majority of California's low-level offenders, still others have lowered their requirements to continue drawing from prisons, meaning that more dangerous inmates may be on the fireline.

Humboldt County is home to two minimum-security inmate fire camps: Eel River, in Redway, and High Rock, in Weott. Eel River Camp Commander Lt. Fred Money said that realignment has not impacted the type of offender or amount of inmates under his supervision. His inmates have "been training all year" and look forward to the fire season.

"They take pride in it. They're going out and contributing something. It gives them a sense of commitment to a goal," Money said in a phone interview.

Normally, state agencies associated with disaster relief such as CalFire will see their budgets wax and wane according to the demands of the previous year. For example, if the agency doesn't use the full allocated budget for field rations in one fiscal year, it will have the leftover amount trimmed the next. But the unprecedented temperatures and drought conditions led Gov. Jerry Brown to declare a state of emergency in 2014, meaning that the agency received augmentation money and the funds to retain additional staff. The Humboldt-Del Norte CalFire unit began hiring seasonal firefighters a full six weeks ahead of schedule in 2015. Unit Chief Hugh Scanlon confirmed the agency retained 100 permanent staff members and, as of late May, hired an additional 70 seasonal personnel. Unlike previous years, the station never completely down-staffed. The seasonal firefighters have been notified that they will return for the season, with an academy to begin in early June. Whether they will earn what Stone calls "that sweet OT" remains unknown.

"It's difficult to have a solid prediction," says Scanlon. "Certainly the fuel predictions are dry and that does not bode well. The forecast from the National Weather Service and forecast prediction center look grim, but you never know until the rainfall is upon you and you have sources of ignition."

Just down the road from the CalFire station in Fortuna, the California Conservation Corps is also gearing up for a hot summer. Normally, corpsmembers in the workforce development program will spend their days doing watershed restoration, removing invasive species or building trails, but fire season means that entire crews of the young people may be called out to do camp support.

"Think of creating a small, operational city," says Raquel Ortega, conservation supervisor at the Fortuna center. "We have 90 members trained and ready to roll. They can get dispatched to anywhere in California and they show up ready to work with the supply crew, do all of the logistical support necessary to feed people, keep people hydrated and check equipment."

The corpsmembers, young people between the ages of 18 and 25, normally earn minimum wage with the Corps, the recruitment motto of which is "hard work, low, pay, miserable conditions and more!"

Fire emergency, however, means overtime pay, and when an emergency is declared the center becomes a hub of frenetic activity, with corpsmembers grabbing their pre-packed fire gear and rushing to line up for their assignments. Camp support is often mundane: Corpsmembers may clean up litter, painstakingly check lengths of hose or inventory and load supplies into trucks. It's common for them and other camp workers to return a few pounds heavier, as fire camp meals are calibrated to fuel the physical demands of firefighters, who require about 6,000 calories a day.

A smaller, carefully selected crew of corpsmembers will also make it to the fireline to cut line and lay hose. In partnership with the U.S. Forest Service, the CCC in Fortuna recently certified 30 wildland firefighters. Many will go on to work directly with the Forest Service. This opportunity was one of the major reasons Justin Lusk, 24, left Sacramento two years ago to join the Corps.

"As soon as I got here I started asking a bunch of questions. I proved myself. I showed that I wanted it," says Lusk. Last year his crew went out on four "rolls," including the Coleman and King fires. Lusk is the lead sawyer for his crew, meaning that in addition to the 45 pounds of standard gear in his kit, he carries a chainsaw to cut line. Last year, his first year on the fireline, his chief concern had nothing to do with the fire itself.

"The thing that caught me off guard was the amount that I could do for myself," he says. "I was mostly worried about my own limitations."

This year, Lusk is confident and ready.

"It could be an active season. I'm looking forward to it. I like helping people out and helping our national forests. I hope to be picked up by the Forest Service in 2016."

The chances of Lusk seeing action somewhere in California are good. Last year there were a total of 5,620 wildfires throughout the state, burning a combined 631,434 acres and generating at least $184 million in damage, according to the National Forest Service.

Despite their enthusiasm for a "good" year, most of those who profit off the season seem to have a healthy respect for the emotional toll of natural disaster. In 2011, Ken Richardson was called out to provide support at a location he knew well. One of his neighbors in Ruth Lake had lost control of a brush fire and it spread to consume 1,500 acres, damaging structures and timberland that included Richardson's own vacation home. Richardson went out on assignment, staging his camp just a few miles away from his home.

"You just never know," he says. "You live long enough you can go to fires on your own property." ●

"Certainly the fuel predictions are dry and that does not bode well."

GET OUT!

Six Continents in Eight Blocks

A walk among the trees in Arcata

By Ryan Scott

getout@northcoastjournal.com

Whether in their natural ecosystems, on old estates or in botanical gardens, the value of being in the presence of trees has been recognized for centuries. This, I believe, helps explain why so many varieties are distributed around the globe. Many of the trees seen in and around urban areas are strictly ornamental, trees that were not brought to North America for lumber or food production, but simply because someone liked the way they looked.

Arcata has some spectacular specimens hidden in plain sight for us to discover. In fact, in a short eight-block walk you can see a tree representative of each continent that has the capacity to grow trees: Asia, Africa, Australia, Europe, South America and, of course, North America.

Our quick trip begins at the top of the hill, H and 13th streets. Head north a short distance on the east side and look up. Here, I hope, is a tree that many passersby are familiar with, as it dominates and anchors the block. Fagus sylvatica Purpurea, or the European Cooper Beech, is a native to the central and southern parts of Europe and is not a tree planted in large numbers locally. Here is one of two in public view throughout Arcata at this maturity. From the sidewalk directly underneath it you can see the cross over limbs grafted into each other, a trait not too many trees share. This tree is incredible year round, though it captivates me each spring when the buds break and the new, fuzzy foliage slowly emerges.

Now continue north to the corner of 14th Street; here is a traditional planting of Irish yew. Taxus baccata, whose native range includes North Africa in addition to Europe and Western Asia. This yew's vertical growth has made them highly desirable for framing views and entries and in gardens for hundreds of years.

From here, cross H Street heading west on 14th Street. When you reach the alley, look south and up, and you'll see the very recognizable Eucalyptus globulus. This species was introduced to California from Australia and is heavily distributed throughout the state, a product of an experiment gone wrong, some say, as the wood did not develop the same traits that make it so useful in its native land.

Continuing west, pop around the corner of I Street heading south and there you'll immediately be under some of the deepest shade you'll find on any of Arcata's sidewalks. Magnolia grandiflora, the Southern, or Evergreen, Magnolia, is native to southeastern North America. Its lustrous, deep green leaves, heavy branching and broad crown make this individual rival any of the others scattered about town. On those days that feel like steamy Georgia, take a cool glass of lemonade and stroll slowly by and you'll understand the importance of these trees to those that bear the South's summers.

Now back out to 14th Street, head west one block to the northeast corner of J and 14 streets. This is one of the most peculiar trees around the area. All the way from the South American countries of Chile and Argentina is Araucaria araucana, better known as the Monkey Puzzle Tree, even though there are no monkeys in Chile or Argentina. This species is said to have been around for 200 million years, so consider this tree a living fossil. One can easily spot a number of these sprouting up in our area. Look for the few mature ones with their low branches arching all the way to the ground — quite a sight.

Let us head down the hill to the southwest corner of J and 13th street and the lovely Japanese maple that resides there. Its common name speaks of its origin. Acer palmatum, native to Asia, has been cultivated for centuries, leading to the selection of more than a thousand varieties, hundreds of which are grown widely today and sought after by aficionados for their varying leaf shapes, delicate branching patterns and colorful leaves or bark.

Go a couple of blocks east and you return to the place we began, but if you continue to look around, you very well may discover the other hidden gems that adorn this town's landscape. Whether with forethought or by chance, I'd like to thank those whose shovels dug the earth where these trees have spread their roots for all us to enjoy. ●

Glamorous Berries

Summer pudding and Pavlova

PINKY UP! BERRIES AND BREAD FOR SIMPLE SUMMER
PUDDING.

CALYPSO BROTMAN

Even when I'm feeling fed up with food (not actual cooking, which I find simultaneously contemplative and entertaining, but with all the books and blogs and the smothering tide of information about the potential ethical and dietary consequences of what we eat), I always enjoy the beginning of summer fruit season. And for periods such as this, when my creativity in the kitchen is fallow and my awareness of bathing suit season is piqued, I make my annual summer pudding for a light, sweet end to a summery dinner. If I am feeling marginally more ambitious, I make summer Pavlova. Both these desserts are simple, butter-less ways to showcase the voluptuous early summer berries we see on sale in the grocery stores now (strawberries and blueberries are just as appropriate as any berry for the rest of the season).

Summer pudding appeals to me in three ways. One, it's easy to make. It involves hardly any "cooking." Two, the finished dessert is extraordinarily bright — liven up your drab life! Three, it facilitates fantasies of picnicking in British Victorian times, wearing gay summer dresses with shirtwaists and laughing demurely as you lounge on the riverbank with Errol and Colin and dish up this traditional, seasonal, delightful English dessert. Pavlova has fewer adorable British connotations, but it is named for the ballerina Anna Pavlova, and is appropriate for, say, a dinner party when you don't want a rich heavy dessert. Simply put, it's a giant meringue topped with berry compote. Meringue is one of my personal favorites, although it leaves one faced with the Leftover Egg Yolk Dilemma. If I was more organized I'd make custard but I'm afraid last time the yolks went to the cats. Think of it as feline altruism.

Summer Pudding

Ingredients and method:

2 pounds fresh mixed berries (any variety)
½ cup sugar (more if the berries are tart)
3 tablespoons water
1 pinch salt
10-12 slices white bread (sandwich, challah or brioche), crusts removed Whipped cream for garnish (optional)

Wash, stem and roughly chop the berries. Put sugar and 3 tablespoons of water into a large pan. Gently heat until sugar dissolves, stirring a few times. Bring the mixture to a boil for 1 minute, then tip in the fruit. Cook the berries for 3 minutes over a low heat, stirring 2 to 3 times. The fruit will be softened, mostly intact and surrounded by dark red juice. Remove the pan from heat.

Line a large glass serving bowl with plastic wrap, as this will help you to turn out the pudding. Push a bread slice into the bottom of bowl, then press slices along the sides, overlapping so all spaces are covered by bread to form bread walls along the sides of the bowl. Pour in the softened fruit and juice, then cover the top with more crust-less bread (cut more if needed). Trim any bread overhang with scissors if needed. Cover the bowl with plastic wrap and a plate, weighing the plate down with soup cans. Chill for 6 hours or overnight. To serve, peel back the plastic wrap on top and put a serving plate upside-down over the bowl. Flip the whole thing over and then remove the plastic wrap over the dome of bread. Serve with any extra berries and whipped cream.

Summer Pavlova

(adapted from Nigella Lawson's Feast)

Ingredients and method:

For the meringue

4 egg whites
1 ¼ cups sugar
1 pinch salt
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon white vinegar
1 teaspoon vanilla

For the topping:

1 lb. berries, single variety of mixed
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon balsamic vinegar
¼ cup sugar
1 pinch salt
2 cups heavy cream

Mix the berries, vanilla, balsamic, sugar and salt and let the mixture sit for at least 30 minutes and up to 2 hours.

Heat the oven to 350 F. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper and draw a circle on the paper using an 8- or 9-inch cake pan as a guide. In the bowl of an electric mixer, combine the egg whites and salt. Begin beating at low speed, slowly increasing to high. Continue until satiny peaks begin to form; gradually beat in sugar a tablespoon at a time until the meringue is stiff and shiny. Sprinkle in the cornstarch, white-wine vinegar and vanilla, folding the ingredients in gently. Mound the meringue onto the parchment within the circle, and shape it into a disk, flattening the top and smoothing the sides. Place it in oven and immediately reduce the heat to 300 F. Bake for 1 hour 15 minutes. Turn off the heat and allow the meringue to cool completely in the oven.

Whip the cream to soft peaks. Remove the cooled meringue from the oven, invert it onto plate and peel off parchment (yes, the meringue is upside down). Use a spatula to apply a generous layer of whipped cream, then spoon over the berry mixture. Serve immediately. ●

A Little Risk

Matt Beard at the Neighborhood Alliance

Talking about art is hazardous. We might be imprecise or get bogged down in biographical minutia or jargon. Talking about surfing is worse. Every surf article published since the 1960s suggests something like Fight Club: you don't talk about where you surf, lest you betray other initiates. And anyway, surfing's a transcendent experience, the stoke of which can only be hinted at through the coarse medium of language. Dude.

So, the genre of surf art is doubly fraught with peril. Painter Matt Beard, who's been making art since he was 16 and surfing since he was 12, opened up a micro-gallery in the Neighborhood Alliance building in Arcata last year. The Neighborhood Alliance is housed in a Quonset hut with a vividly colored, almost abstract Beard waterscape over the threshold. The tin roof shelters a cluster of synergistically connected businesses — among them surfboard shaping and repair by Greg Cicero, Marnie Nave's Seapod hand-printed hoodies and textiles, succulent garden design by Fancy Plantsy and BeardArt's paintings.

Artist-owned spaces like the Alliance have been popping up with increasing frequency. The artists associated with these spaces are opting out of traditionally structured art sales with the gallery as middleman and gatekeeper.

In an online chat, Beard talked about the new venture and answered questions about surfing, art and the space between.

How did you learn your craft as a painter?

MB: Still working on it. Lots of trial and error. Mostly error. I did go to [Humboldt State University], where I tuned out and completely ignored a lot of great advice from some really great professors, like Theresa Stanley and Leslie Price. I see their art around town and still get nervous that they'll catch me slacking.

How are surfing and painting connected for you?

MB: Surfing is just one part of my life. But when I make art about walking around the block when I'm stressed out, folks don't respond to it nearly as well.

A "surf artist" works with limited subjects: surfers, waves, beaches. Do these restrictions enhance creativity, like poetry in a strict form?

MB: What is implied is often more powerful than what is stated plainly. So I have series where waves are the subject of every painting, but not a single actual wave is painted. My insinuation pieces focus on the water in front of a breaking wave and the shadow the wave casts, while my sine series explores waves from a more cerebral, mathematical perspective.

I like your almost-abstract paintings of water in motion. I understand you painted one of these live at Arcata Theatre Lounge's Ocean Night last year.

MB: The live art pieces are a different animal altogether from the studio art or outdoor plein air work that I enjoy. The live art pieces require a willingness to launch an embarrassing dud in a room full of expectant eyes. I sort of insist on coming to a live piece with no plan whatsoever. Things go sideways all the time, so you may as well just stay flexible and flow with it.

It's a pressure cooker of adrenaline that can't be matched in the studio, giving it a much more heightened "in the moment" feeling. Kinda like surfing, but sheesh, I wish there was a better way to say that. Surfing is one of those things that almost shouldn't really be talked about ever.

Since the 1960s a genre of surf art has emerged with its own exhibition spaces, collectors and markets. Are you inspired by the traditional heroes of surf art, like John Severson? Contemporary artists like William Mackinnon?

MB: Two main vectors of inspiration in my work come from Rick Griffin's iconic rock concert graphic work from the '60s and '70s and William Wendt's California impressionism from the early 20th century. But my hero is Rick Griffin. A lot of artists in our little world would say the same, but shoot, it was his work that turned me on to the reality that art could be anything at all. He died in a motorcycle accident in 1991 and all the surf magazines ran tributes to his life and work and that's where I found the spark to get this art fire going. Contemporary artists like Erik Abel in Ventura and Spencer Reynolds up in Brookings are pretty far out. And good people, too.

The Neighborhood Alliance has been around since October. How did you get connected with this project?

MB: I've known the partners for a long time ... I reckon I could always rent my own private spaces somewhere anytime, but I can't always be part of a rad group of folks doing a new thing right from the start. ...

Because it's shared space with independent artists' micro-galleries, the Alliance represents a change in the way artists traditionally connect with the public. How did you and your partners decide to establish this kind of business?

MB: ... Nobody was approaching this with any intent to change the way things work, it was more of a natural convergence of folks already moving in the same direction. I'd had a space of my own in Eureka's Henderson Center for a few years ... I took a big risk leaving behind my old shop, but since when did making art not involve risk? My little micro gallery arose out of just wanting a space to do my thing independently while still being part of a group effort where we all benefit from one another's energy, passion, ideas and presence. ●

As part of North Coast Open Studios, the Alliance hosts an all-day celebration Saturday, June 13 for of all things art and surf: a Surfrider membership drive, Mike Dronkers on site for KHUM and surf rock from the Sand Fleas.

HEARTFIRE BAKERY

Heartfire Bakery is a small Arcata bakery that provides gluten free baked goods, gluten free, organic granola and a gluten free bread mix to Humboldt County and beyond.

Shamira Heinz started her business four years ago with the intent to provide gluten free options for people who have Celiac or Gluten Intolerance in our community. She discovered fresh gluten free breads and granola have a better texture and flavor than a product that has been frozen or has sat on the shelf for a while and enjoys sharing her creative recipes. In the future, she hopes to have her products available at the local Farmer's Markets, for now you can find her Coconut Cacao Granola and Bread Mix at local health-food stores. For more information visit www.heartfirebakery.com

HASTA BE PASTA

It was a circuitous route for the Venturis to reach Humboldt County — Bologna, Italy to Beatrice, Nebraska and finally to Arcata. “We love nature,” says Gianpaolo Venturi. “We love the ocean and our house is in the middle of the forest.” But the Bologna native also brought his talent for northern Italian cuisine. After a career at a Beatrice supermarket, Gianpaolo and Madeliene Venturi were beckoned by daughter Elizabeth, an HSU marine biology major, who knew her parents would love Humboldt. And finding a welcoming kitchen at Casa Lindra in Aldergrove Industrial Park, the Venturis began combining their market retail experience with Bolognese favorites. They produced the Hasta Be Pasta line of pasta dressed with traditional sauces, a line of antipastas as well as grab-and-go snack wraps. “It’s very tasty,” promises Gianpaolo. Now Hasta distributes its portable product at Wildberries Marketplace, the Murphy’s Markets, North Coast Co-op, Eureka Natural Foods, as well as HSU’s on-campus stores. “More is coming!”

In the Beginning

Arcata, birthplace of brilliance

By Jennifer Savage

thesetlist@northcoastjournal.com

This week brings us the goodness of two women who launched from Arcata to find smashing success elsewhere, and are returning to play hometown shows; plus, an anniversary of A-town's delivery from a Footloose-like existence. Read on...

Friday

Local girl returns #1

Rose Armin-Hoiland presents "Gotta Have a Song" — her first show in Arcata since relocating to Oakland in 2012 — at the Arcata Playhouse. Born and raised in Arcata, Armin-Hoiland sang before she talked and began performing in choirs and musical theatre shortly thereafter. As a teenager, she formed a jazz trio with high school friends and, at age 15, started a four-year run as a headliner at Arcata's annual Martin Luther King Jr. Day Celebration. At age 18, Armin-Hoiland began collaborating with local musicians, including Darius Brotman and Aber Miller, to play clubs, weddings, theatres and benefits. During all this, Armin-Hoiland longed to join the Oakland Interfaith Gospel Choir — a goal she achieved three years ago. The choir leaves for a three-country European tour this July and the Playhouse event is the main fundraiser for her trip. "Gotta Have a Song," mixes soul, jazz and funk, and features musicians from both Humboldt County and the Bay Area, including Aber Miller, Drew Mohr, Miles Lathan and Joel Armin-Hoiland. Tickets are $21 general, $16 members, and the show is all ages. Advance tickets on sale at Wildberries.

Saturday

Local girl returns #2

Remember when we talked about this show a few weeks ago? To recap, expect emotional and startling jazz standards from the 1930s to 1950s interpreted by singer Brisa Roché with Steve Smith on piano and Baron Wolfe on bass. Roché was born in Arcata and raised by an artist mother and adventurer father. She left home with her guitar at 16 to bask in the glory days of Seattle grunge, traded her acoustic for an electric and began broadening her repertoire. After the death of her father, Roché moved to Paris and plunged into the masculine jazz world as a bandleader and frontwoman, cutting her teeth five nights a week in the stone “caves” of St. Germain, where she was discovered by Blue Note and signed to EMI in 2004. She has collaborated with Nick Zinner (the Yeah Yeah Yeahs), Rosemary Standley (Moriarty), Toby Dammit (Iggy Pop) and the renowned King Khan. Show at 8 p.m., doors at 7:30 p.m. at the Arcata Playhouse Tickets at $15 general, $13 members and students, and are available at Wildberries or online at www.arcataplayhouse.org.

In which we celebrate Arcata's return to the light

Gather 'round, children and transplants, and let us tell you of the dark days of yesteryear, 2001 to 2003 to be precise, when the fair city of Arcata was under siege by a police chief who dreamed of creating his very own Bomont — a town where dancing was outlawed and live music was a thing wrought from demon hands. The citizens of Arcata despaired of ever knowing the catharsis of being in a dark bar delivering themselves to the gods of rock 'n' roll.

And then, lo! The heavy-handed police chief resigned and Alibi owner Justin Ladd hied to City Hall to acquire a live music permit — and it was good. Thus, Ian Hiler began booking bands — and it was also good. 'Twas Thursday, June 12, 2003, that the Alibi hosted its first night of live music, with mountain-metal masters The Hitch and garage kings The Letdown. Exactly one year later, Dragged by Horses opened for the Japanese psych-blues band DMBQ. Now Roshawn Beere and Steve Bohner, former members of The Hitch, and Pablo Midence, former frontman for Dragged by Horses, comprise three-quarters of Lord Ellis (with Andy Sorter filling out the band on electric piano). And it is this very Lord Ellis that opens the 12-year anniversary celebration at the Alibi on Saturday at 11 p.m., $5, 21-and-over.

But these aristocrats of heavy sound are not the only historical artifacts, nay! The past continues to spin into the present. It was on March 18, 2004, that MooM — featuring Colin Begell on guitar and vocals, Andy “Boom Boom” Powell on bass, Ryan Brodie on lap steel and Brian Godwin on drums — debuted at The Alibi. And MooM begat Rasper begat Strix Vega, who descended into the Alibi on June 25, 2005, and it was most wonderfully good. In 2007, Jay Forbes, he of the perpetual smile, replaced Godwin and the band continues to bless the faithful and uninitiated alike with spacy instrumentals and heartwrenching alt-folk. And it is this very Strix Vega that will shepherd the anniversary celebration into the wee hours, the magic hours, the hours at which we can only imagine that bitter old police chief tossing in his bed, nightmares of people having fun undoing him. And thus we give thanks unto Hiler for serving as the tireless conduit to so much fantastic, heavy, wild, beautiful, rockin' bands all these years.

Ever onward...

An instrumental cause

The good people at the Sanctuary want to start the Humboldt Folk Music School, so they're throwing a benefit featuring the divine and beautiful Mad River Rose, Kinetic Paranormal Society, Belles of the Levee, Bayou Swamis and Norton Sub-tonic with a community potluck at 6 p.m., performances starting at 7 p.m. Admission is a sliding scale donation of $5 to $20, all ages.

Your principal source of funk

In non-Arcata shows, hey, Blue Lake! Unwind your minds and rethread your heads 'cause Motherlode's bringing the funk to The Logger Bar. For free. Riffs laid from 9 p.m. on. Be 21-or-over.

Etc.

Full show listings in the Journal's Music and More grid, the Eight Days a Week calendar and online. Bands and promoters, send your gig info, preferably with a high-res photo or two, to music@northcoast-journal.com. ●

COMIC ASH FISHER.
COURTESY OF REDWOOD COMEDY FESTIVAL

Funny in Fortuna

Hey, wanna hear something funny? Then hurry up and get a ticket. The Redwood Comedy Festival is splitting sides again in Fortuna on Friday, June 12 and Saturday, June 13 ($5 door Friday, $25 door Saturday, $30 two-day pass, $175 two-day VIP table for four with wine). Some 48 comedians from around the country are in the lineup, so somebody is bound to tickle your funny bone.

On Friday night, catch grown-up class clowns all over town with shows starting at 8 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. at Funky Monkey, L's Kitchen, Springville Steak, the Playroom and Time Out Sports Pub, and at 10:30 p.m. at Eel River Brewery. Just pick a venue, grab a seat and watch strangers turn their family dysfunction, failed relationships and wry observations into a fun evening out.

On Saturday night, work on your core by belly-laughing at the River Lodge. Over a dozen comedians hit the main stage at 6:30 p.m. for the game show. Then it's a marathon of stand-up comedy with nearly three dozen performers on the mic from 8 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Don't heckle (everybody hates it — everybody) and don't blink, because you never know who'll turn out to be the next big thing.

The Art of Wine

When the world seems to shine like you've had too much wine, that's Fortuna.

The Rotary Club of Fortuna has been pairing wine and art lovers with some of the best on the vine and canvas for more than two decades. The popular Art & Wine in the Park, a fundraiser for the club's community projects, has been crushing it for 26 years and this year is no exception. The event offers a taste of more than 20 wines — both local and other California varieties — to please the palate. Whether you like it dry or doux, there's a pour for you.

Head out to Rohner Park on Sunday, June 14 from noon to 4 p.m. to sip wine, listen to live music and browse the vibrant art market featuring more than 50 local crafters and artists. After you've perused the wares in the silent auction tent, spread out your picnic blanket, unfold a couple of lawn chairs and tip your glass as Twango Macallan serenades you. When it's time to sop up the syrah, there are pulled pork sandwiches for nibbling, oysters for slurping (keep it classy, this is a swanky affair) and other culinary delights. Entry to the event is free and $25 gets you a tasting glass.

Let the good times flow.

Take a break from Anna and Elsa at the Arkley Center for the Performing Arts on Saturday, June 13 at 3:30 p.m. when Trinity Ballet Academy performs Sleeping Beauty ($18, $12 kids 11 and under). Adora Stebbins and Jonathan Wisan dance the parts of the happy couple under Greta Leverett's direction. Emily Denny saves the day as the Lilac Fairy Queen, and Sarah Traywick goes dark side in the role of wicked fairy Carabosse. Expect brain-melting cuteness from kids as young as 4 tottering in their tutus in the first act and upper-level dancers performing the ballet's original choreography by Marius Petipa in the second act. That's when we get the big wedding and lively solos from attendees such as Cinderella, Red Riding Hood — with the Wolf as her plus one — and Puss in Boots.

Need more magic? Trilium Dance Studios is up at the Van Duzer Theatre on Saturday, June 13 at 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. and Sunday, June 14 at 2 p.m. with Olympus, a parade of characters from Greek mythology danced by students ages 4 to adult ($13, $8, reserved $15, $10). Prepare for original choreography by Erin McKeever and studio

McCarthy's smooth in Spy,
Entourage parties on

SPY. When Bridesmaids (2011) dropped and blew up I, like everyone else, applauded its success. In hindsight, though, there was and is something disingenuous, something backhanded about much of the praise lavished on it. It seems to me that many viewers, particularly those with, shall we say less refined comic taste, liked the movie because it took them by surprise. Somehow, this far along into human history, people still don't seem to realize that women can be/funny. This may be why I didn't greet Bridesmaids with the same raucous, shocked enthusiasm as so many others. To my jaundiced eye, it is a funny if conventional studio comedy. Yes, the cast is dominated by females, but so what? I suppose I am a bit of a bleeding-heart feminist, but that's beside the point. Of course women are funny, of course women can carry a mainstream comedy.

But not everyone shares my opinions — often for the best, I think we can all agree — and so director Paul Feig has carved himself a comfortable, lucrative little niche in Hollywood. And made Melissa McCarthy a movie star in the process. After Bridesmaids, they reteamed on The Heat (2013), an underrated if not excellent riff on buddy cop comedies. (Incidentally, both were written by women). At that point a pattern was developing, but I was too blind to see it. Now Feig, this time working from his own script, has McCarthy back in the lead with his version of a feminist (post-feminist?) spy spoof. On first viewing, my takeaway: These last three Feig movies have landed well because they all bow to genre convention, except in the casting. Even Bridesmaids, the script for which was more nuanced and humane than most wedding comedies, got its biggest laughs from an extended diarrhea sequence. Placed in the context of a stupid dude movie, that scene would likely have played funny, probably just gross. But in situ, we treat it as a milestone for the women's movement; I wonder.

Spy takes us into Feig's version of the world of international espionage. McCarthy plays Susan Cooper, a dowdy but capable CIA agent. She works behind the scenes at headquarters in Langley, serving as eye in the sky and voice in the earpiece to super-suave superspy Bradley Fine (Jude Law), on whom she has a serious crush. When villainous arms dealer Rayna Boyanov (Rose Byrne), who also reveals that she knows the identities of the Agency's other field agents, takes Fine down in the field, Cooper is tapped to go undercover. In order to make this at all plausible, Feig feeds us some generally palatable background: Because Cooper is unassuming and has never been in the field, she won't be recognized as CIA. Also she has exceptional hand-to-hand combat skills. The job takes our protagonist across Europe, shadowing Boyanov as she closes in on the sale of portable nuclear device. Evil henchmen abound, particularly with the introduction of dapper black marketeer Sergio De Luca (Bobby Cannavale) and his crew. Before long, Cooper is getting bloody, her job further complicated by the presence of CIA-field-agent-gone-rogue Rick Ford (Jason Statham, doing a delightfully funny send-up of almost every other character he's ever played) and her nervous office-mate Nancy (Miranda Hart).

McCarthy is beyond charismatic, and her comic timing is impeccable, so she is able to carry what would probably otherwise be a bit of a non-starter. In the early going, Feig gets a little more visually ambitious than in previous work, which is in keeping with the globe-trotting, Baccarat-crystal genre. The aesthetic and the action become increasingly conventional until the big finish comes along, more whimper than bang. To be fair, Spy is consistently funny and most assuredly R-rated, mostly for language and violence, but also for what the MPAA calls "graphic nudity" in a sequence involving a henchman's, um, selfies. Still, the Feig formula is starting to feel a little parlor-tricky. Yes, this is a clever, big-budget take on the spy comedy. And, yes, it's great McCarthy is the lead, but at the end of the day it is still very much a Hollywood product designed for mass appeal. R. 120m.

ENTOURAGE. One could easily paint this as antithetical to what Feig is doing over in his camp, a reaction to the feminizing of genre but ... well, no buts about it. Entourage is (and I should clarify that I've never watched the show) proudly phallocentric, a celebration of the occasionally sensitive but please, not too sensitive, male ego. A case could be made that it is a self-aware wink at insider Hollywood culture, but to call it satire would be assigning undue credit.

The movie catches us up with A-lister Vinnie Chase (Adrian Grenier) who, on the heels of an exceptionally short marriage, decides he wants to direct a feature. He gathers his crew of flunkies and his former-manager-turned-studio-head Ari Gold (Jeremy Piven) and sets out to spend $100 million-plus on a post-apocalyptic Je-kyll and Hyde picture. When he goes over budget, it attracts the attention of the Texas money (Billy Bob Thornton), who dispatches his unbalanced son (Haley Joel Osment) to LA as his watchdog. There's some baby mama drama, some studio politics and a great number of statuesque women in various states of undress. It's a good enough time, if redundant, rambling and formless. R. 104m.

Previews

JURASSIC WORLD. Dinosaur theme park? Sure, that'll work out fine. Again. With Chris Pratt fighting off the feisty fossils. PG13. 124m.

Continuing

ALOHA. Quality players Bradley Cooper, Emma Stone and Rachel McAdams are stuck with thin characters and a hot mess of a plot in a pretty place. PG13. 105m.

AVENGERS: AGE OF ULTRON. A big, cacophonous superhero sequel with a stellar cast, Director Joss Whedon's trademark quippy writing and serious meditations on human nature. PG13. 141m.

INSIDIOUS: CHAPTER 3. A prequel to the creepiness with a girl beset by spirits and a psychic who comes to her aid. PG13. 114m.

MAD MAX: FURY ROAD. Wildly intense action and chases do the original proud, plus an added heart and intelligence in the story and the well-crafted characters. With Tom Hardy and Charlize Theron. R. 120m.

PITCH PERFECT 2. Nothing new in the world of singing underdog comedies, but it delivers the laughs and musical numbers. Elizabeth Banks directs and joins the onscreen fun with Anna Kendrick and John Michael Higgins. PG13. 115m.

SAN ANDREAS. A typical disaster-and-popcorn movie with all the clichés, but it works, thanks in no small part to the charm of star Dwayne Johnson. PG13. 114m.

TOMORROWLAND. Disneyland with George Clooney — all your dreams come true. Young geniuses and an inventor travel through time in a sci-fi family adventure. PG. 130m.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF JOHN HENRY SHELTON, ALSO KNOWN AS JOHN H. SHELTON CASE NO. PR150134

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of JOHN HENRY SHELTON, also known as JOHN H. SHELTON A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner, TINA SHELTON MACKENZIE In the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that TINA SHELTON MACKENZIE Be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority. A HEARING on the petition will be held on June 11, 2015 at 2:00 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 8. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law. YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. ATTORNEY FOR PETITIONER: Catherine M. Koshkin, Esq., CSB #149503 Koshkin Law Firm 1116 Eleventh Street Arcata, CA 95521 (707) 822-2800 Filed: May 21, 2015 SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA COUNTY OF HUMBOLDT

NOTICES

NOTICE OF PROPERTY TAX DELINQUENCY AND IMPENDING DEFAULT

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3351, 3352

I, John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, State of California, certify as follows:

That at close of business on June 30, 2015 by operation of law, any real property (unless previously tax-defaulted and not redeemed) that have any delinquent taxes, assessments, or other charges levied for the fiscal year 2014-2015, and/or any delinquent supplemental taxes levied prior to the fiscal year 2014-2015 shall be declared tax-defaulted.

That unless the tax defaulted property is completely redeemed through payment of all unpaid amounts, together with penalties and fees prescribed by law or an installment plan is initiated and maintained; the property may be subsequently sold at a tax sale in satisfaction of the tax lien.

That a detailed list of all properties remaining tax-defaulted at the close of business on June 30, 2015, and not redeemed prior to being submitted for publication, shall be published on or before September 8, 2018.

That information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption of tax-defaulted property will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector at 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, California 95501 (707)476-2450.

I certify or (declare), under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is true and correct.

John Bartholomew
Humboldt County Tax Collector

Executed at Eureka, Humboldt County, California, on May 22nd, 2015. Published in the North Coast Journal on May 28th, June 4th, and June 11th, 2015.

NOTICE OF IMPENDING POWER TO SELL TAX-DEFAULTED PROPERTY

Revenue and Taxation Code Section 3361, 3362

Pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Codes sections 3691 and 3692.4, the following conditions will, by operation of law, subject real property to the Tax Collector's power to sell.

1) All property for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for five or more years.

Note: The power to sell schedule for nonresidential commercial property is three or more years of tax-defaulted status, unless the county adopts, by ordinance or resolution, the five-year tax-default schedule.

2) All property that has a nuisance abatement lien recorded against it and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

3) Any property that has been identified and requested for purchase by a city, county, city and county, or nonprofit organization to serve the public benefit by providing housing or services directly related to low-income persons and for which property taxes and assessments have been in default for three or more years.

The parcels listed herein meet the one or more of the criteria listed above and thus, will become subject to the Tax Collector's power to sell on July 1, 2015, at 12:01 a.m., by operation of law. The Tax Collector's power to sell will arise unless the property is either redeemed or made subject to an installment plan of redemption initiated as provided by law prior to close of business on the last business day in June. The right to an installment plan terminates on the last business day in June, and after that date the entire balance due must be paid in full to prevent sale of the property at public auction.

The right of redemption survives the property becoming subject to the power to sell, but it terminates at close of business on the last business day prior to the date of the sale by the Tax Collector.

All information concerning redemption or the initiation of an installment plan of redemption will be furnished, upon request, by John Bartholomew, Humboldt County Tax Collector, 825 5th Street, Room 125, Eureka, CA 95501, (707)476-2450.

The amount to redeem, including all penalties and fees, as of June 2015, is shown opposite the assessment/parcel number and next to the name of the assessee.

PARCEL NUMBERING SYSTEM EXPLANATION

The Assessor's Parcel/Assessment Number (APN/ASMT), when used to describe property in this list, refers to the Assessor's map book, the map page, the block on the map, if applicable, and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The Assessor's maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor's office.

Climate Change 101

Part 1: Global Warming

By Barry Evans

fieldnotes@northcoastjournal.com

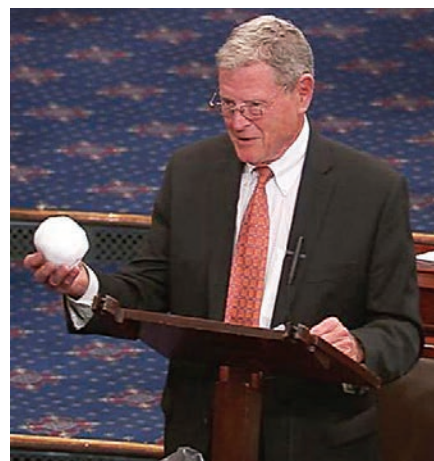

Confusion reigns around the terms “global warming” and “climate change.” I often see gleeful blog comments from climate-change deniers to the effect of, Scientists are so unsure of global warming that they’re now calling it “climate change.” Here’s a little clarification.

Climate change refers to long-term change in Earth’s climate, which has multiple effects. One of these is global warming, that is, the change in average surface temperature. According to virtually every climatologist and scientific association, global warming is mainly caused by increasing levels of carbon dioxide, a “greenhouse” gas resulting from burning fossil fuels such as coal, natural gas and oil.

Most attention focuses on the warming aspects of CO₂-induced climate change, about two degrees Fahrenheit in the last 150 years. This is unfortunate, because unusually cold weather offers stubbornly defiant politicians, such as Sen. Jim Inhofe (pictured above with snowball), the opportunity to “prove” global warming is a hoax, thereby sabotaging meaningful political action.

While the overall trend is toward warming, climate change of the sort we’re now getting used to (“The Future Weather is Now,” March 19) causes extreme swings in weather. For instance, warm and dry drought weather in California is typically matched by cold and wet polar vortex conditions on the East Coast (think of a fridge, where the cold inside is counterbalanced by the warm condenser coils at the back), so, ironically, Inhofe’s snowball-in-February stunt demonstrated climate change. Global warming is responsible for other alarming trends, such as:

Rising sea levels, which are caused both by ocean warming (since warm water occupies greater volume than cold) and ice cap and glacier melting. At the present rate, this century will see Earth’s oceans rise about a foot (conservatively — the rate is accelerating). Island nations such as Tuvalu and the Maldives already feel the effects; Miami isn’t far behind, especially as a warmer atmosphere makes events like hurricanes Katrina and Sandy more likely.

Decreasing fresh water. We’re seeing this in California as we enter our fourth year of drought (unprecedented in the last 1,200 years), where the Central Valley water table depth is dropping precipitously; thousand-foot-deep irrigation wells — unheard of a generation ago — are now commonplace. Rising sea levels also lead to salinization of groundwater and estuaries, thus contaminating traditional sources of fresh water.

Disruption of coral reefs. Coral reefs occupy 1 percent of the ocean floor, but are home to a quarter of all marine species and some 500 million people living in the tropics depend on them for survival. However, many species of coral are stressed to the point of dying, unable to adapt to warming ocean water. Currently about 10 percent of coral reefs are dead, with another 60 percent at risk.

Population instability. When a people’s food and water supply is threatened, myriad problems arise, including conflict and war, disease and infant mortality, economic stress and poverty, refugees and migration (particularly from rural areas to cities).

And yet global warming may not be the worst consequence of climate change. Next week, we’ll be looking at its “evil twin,” ocean acidification. ●

Barry Evans (barryevans9@yahoo.com) worries about the world Sen. Inhofe will leave to his 20 children and grandchildren.

City of Point Arena City Manager

Point Arena, a community of 483 residents in the South Coast region of Mendocino County, is located adjacent to the newly established California Coastal National Monument at Point Arena - acknowledging this area as some of the most naturally beautiful scenery in the world. The City of Point Arena functions as the cultural and economic center for the approximately 5,000 residents that live within the 15 miles radius of the City. Anchored by the world class Arena Theater, Coastal Community Library, and Point Arena Joint Schools K-12, residents appreciate the businesses & banking, medical & dental services, art & food cooperatives, restaurants and cafes that create this small, rural city.

With a recent change to a City Manager form of government, the City is now looking for a City Manager to help take the organization to the next level. The ideal candidate will need to be a do it yourself, big picture generalist with strong administrative/management, financial and planning skills, with municipal experience (two to five years). With 12 ft/pt employees and a budget of less than $1 million, the City is offering a salary of up to $65,000 annually for a 32-hour work week with very generous benefits (no PERS). A Bachelors degree is required and strong interpersonal skills are desired.

Please send your cover letter and resume electronically to: David W. Tyson-Interim City Manager - PA-citymgr@mcn.org Call David W. Tyson at (707) 882-2122 or (707) 499-4831 (cell) for more information or to request a detailed brochure that describes in greater detail this tremendous opportunity. The brochure is also available on our web site at www.cityofpointarena.net

NEW LISTING!

REDWOOD CREEK LAND/ PROPERTY $325,000

±34 Acres, and only 30 minutes from Arcata on Chezem Road. Become part of the elite Redwood Valley community with this amazing property. Enjoy your summers on over ¼ mile Redwood Creek frontage with a fantastic swimming hole. Private road access, low elevation, and power to the property make this a dream.

WEITCHPEC LAND/ PROPERTY $329,000

Amazing ±160 acre parcel. All the running water you could ever use year round with many springs and with Miners Creek running through it! Several large flats, southern exposure, springs, timber and finished cabin and 35ft Hitchhiker 5th wheel with built in washer/dryer and everything is waiting for you in this private location. Running water 365 days a year. Large agricultural sites. This is the nicest place on the mountain. This land has everything except you.

REDUCED PRICE!

DINSMORE LAND/ PROPERTY $425,000

Hunter, rancher, and sportsman enthusiasts listen up! Two bedroom, two bath cabin on ±40 acres featuring both wooded oak lands and rolling meadows.

Enjoy an open floor plan and custom woodwork with room to sleep the whole family in the two large loft spaces. A great place to ride horses, run cattle, play around on ATV's, or just enjoy some rest and relaxation off the beaten path. Great timber investment. Water sources are both a pond and creek. Priced to sell at $425,000. OWC with 25% down.

WILDWOOD LAND/PROPERTY $185,000

This beautiful and very remote ±160 acre property features abundant supply of water, southern exposure, roads, privacy, and views of Yolly Bolly Mountain. You must see this lot to truly appreciate what it has to offer.

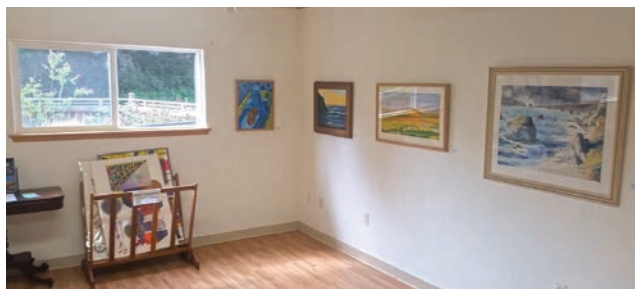

Westhaven Center for the Arts

Nestled in the Redwoods, Westhaven Center for the Arts acts as a cultural center for the residents of Westhaven/Trinidad. "As you see from the artists represented in our current show, we also have members from Arcata, McKinleyville, Eureka and other neighboring communities," explains Ann Anderson, exhibit coordinator. The group formed almost 20 years ago with the purpose of providing a space where art, music and culture could be shared with all ages.

Westhaven Center for the Arts is run by an all-volunteer work force, including office manager, Debra Messa, exhibit coordinator, Ann Anderson and resident artist, Antoinette "Toni" Magyar. The team at Westhaven Center for the Arts always welcomes new members. "We opened Westhaven Center for the Arts as something for the community to enjoy. We have an always-changing art selection and we show mostly Humboldt area artists. We also offer art classes, yoga, children's workshops and tai chi," Debra explains. "We are really trying to bring in a younger audience as well," explains Toni.

With the Westhaven Center for the Arts located at 501 S. Westhaven Drive, they are a quick trip to Murphy's Market Trinidad. "Murphy's is always doing great things for this community, they always support the center and their food is delicious," Debra explains. "It's also a place where everyone knows your name and you know theirs."

For more information about the Westhaven Center for the Arts, you can visit them at 501 S. Westhaven Drive in Westhaven or call them at 677-9493. You can also visit their website, www.westhavencenter.org or visit them on Facebook. If you are interested in becoming a member give them a call, and know that you will be supporting a community-minded organization.
